

I am a truckdriver, and my run takes me to Chicago everynight. I depend on XM to give me the traffic info I need to make sure that the loads that I am pulling make it to their destination on time!!! Most of the major interstate hiways leading into and out of Chicago are under major road construction some of which are not scheduled to be completed for a couple of years. As you may know the later my loads get to the dock the longer the product takes to get to the shelves for the consumer. I love my XM radio and the service it provides. No matter how far from Chicago I am, I am informed on the traffic tie-ups long before I am stuck in one. I dont have to wait until a signal is strong enough for my am fm radio to receive and then wait for 20 minutes for them to fly through a report and not cover half of the routes. I believe that if I am spending my hard earned money on a product to make my job easier and my drive more enjoyable noone should be able to force me into listening to a poor station when there is a better option!!
